

A building performance standard improves communities.

A BPS can be used to address community priorities including air quality, lower energy bills, health, resilience, and economic opportunities.

